NOTICES.

COMMUNICATIONS.—Literary communications should be sent to either of the Editors. All business matters, including payment of Subscriptions, &c., should be communicated to the Publishers, 19, Rampant Horse Street, Norwich.

INDICES.—INDICES to Vol. IV. of the former Series (Rerum, Nominum et Locorum), may be had of the Publishers, price One Shilling. Complete Indices to Vols. I., II., III., IV., V., VI., VII., and X., with Title Pages, &c., price 2/6 each net, post free. Embossed Cloth Cases for binding these several volumes may be also obtained, price One Shilling each net. Provision is made for the reception of the monthly wrappers at the end of the volume if desired. The full Rerum Index (Contents) with Title Pages, &c., in wrapper (pp. 8) to Vols. VIII., IX., XI., and XII. (similar to those issued with other volumes), price One Shilling each, post free. Subscribers who may wish for one or more of these Special Index Parts, &c., should apply to the Publishers, and make the necessary payment.

COMPLETE VOLUMES.—The original Series (four vols. edited by Tymms) is entirely out of print. Vol. I. of the New (Second) Series is also out of print. Only a few bound vols. (II.—XII.) remain; these may, for the present, be obtained of the Publishers, at Norwich, at 15/- each, net.

ADVERTISEMENTS.—The East Anglian is a good medium for literary and other suitable advertisements, and as the monthly covers are generally bound up with each volume, a permanence not usually obtainable is thereby ensured.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.—The Annual Subscription, Five Shillings, post free, is payable in advance.

THE DISCIPLINE OF THE NORWICH DUTCH CHURCH, 1641.

In bringing to a close our transcript of an early portion of the Baptismal Register of the Norwich Dutch Church, it will not be without interest briefly to recall the prevailing 'discipline' which governed the church, especially in regard to the rite of baptism.

The 'discipline' of the sixteenth century was, it would seem, derived from that originally put forth in 1556 and subsequent revisions, that of 1641* being mainly followed by both the Dutch and French Churches with a view to closer union. This recognised form of church government was published in London in 1645, and copies have become very scarce and valuable. It appeared under the title—

CORPUS DISCIPLINÆ: or the DISCIPLINE. Together with the Forme of all Ecclesiastical Administrations used in the Dutch Churches within this Kingdom with the Confession of Faith and the Catechisme published by the Ministers and Elders of the Dutch Congregation in London. London: Printed by John Field for Ralph Smith at the sign of the Bible in Cornhill neer the Royal Exchange. 1645. (Sm. 8vo.), pp. iv. 95.†

The publication is both interesting and instructive, not only for the light it throws upon the government of the Dutch Church, but on account of its theological, not to say liturgical, value. From the standpoint of a Churchman it is certainly far in advance of the Directory for the Public Worship of God, which was at the very same period put forward by the Parliament to supplant the Book of Common Prayer. This is observable in regard to the Sacrament of Baptism, no less than other portions. The rite was to be administered only by such as were lawfully called to the ministry. The child was to be presented by the father, accompanied by witnesses well affected to the reformed religion. Names given in baptism were to be chiefly those found in Holy Scripture, names proper to God or Christ (as Immanuel, &c.) were forbidden. "As for sprinkling once or three times we hold it indifferent." Private baptism was only to be administered "in case of persecution, and then in the presence of four or five believers, and not otherwise." The baptismal register was to contain the names of parents and witnesses (the number is not stated; in the French Reformed Church four are required). It was irregular for children of Dutch parents to be baptised in a parish church—such baptisms were, however, not infrequent—they are to be accounted for by the action of the authorities in seeking to attach parishioners to their own parish churches. This was a matter that gave rise to considerable discussion. The Lord's Supper was to be received "either standing, going, or sitting." This was a vexed question at Norwich, where the bishop (Overall) sought to impose, at first, the rule of standing, ultimately insisting upon a kneeling posture; the bishop's death, however, seems to have closed the controversy. The reception of the Lord's Supper, "going," i.e., as the communicant was on the move, appears to us very undignified and irreverent. It may be intended to signify the hasty departure of the Israelites from Egypt! Christ's birth, circumcision, resurrection, and ascension, and the sending of the Holy Ghost, were to be solemnly commemorated; also the appointed days of fasting. The Psalms, set in metre by Petrus Dathenus, were to be "tuned" by a precentor, if not by the minister. The ecclesiastical discipline proper includes an interesting and lengthy form of excommunication with subsequent reconciliation. Altogether the ordering of these Dutch Churches was most salutary.

* The Synod (Colloquium or Conference) promulgated this code Sept. 19th, 1641.

† The late Mr. W. J. C. Moens (Walloon and their Church at Norwich chap. viii., "Discipline," etc.) seems to have been unacquainted with this publication.

The Confession of Faith (thirty-seven Articles) of "the Belgick Reformed Churches" is that of the Dort Synod (1618-9), and together with the Catechism (with a short abstract) forms quite a body of divinity.*

The Synod (to take place once every three years at the least) was to be held in the following order:—Norwich, Colchester, London, Sandwich, and Yarmouth. Whether or no the particular order here laid down has any significance we cannot say; perhaps it may be best interpreted by a direction in this Corpus Disciplinæ that "no church shall have dominion above another church, no minister above other ministers," etc.

* The Heidelberg Catechism was translated into English for the use of English people of the Dutch Reformed Church by Petrus de Witte, who was connected with Norwich, and published at Amsterdam in 1654. A Petrus de Witte (Peter White) was settled in Norwich and baptised in the Dutch Church there. He was one of a large family identified with the church and the city from the earliest days of the community until the present time. The book is a gigantic undertaking of more than 800 closely-printed pages. A close acquaintance with it does not impress us with an undue sense of weariness.

SUFFOLK WITCHES IN THE TIME OF QUEEN ELIZABETH.

The opinions and remarks of Sir Thomas Browne, the famous physician of Norwich, on witches and witchcraft have been frequently quoted. The following description of witches in Suffolk is by an earlier physician, equally learned for his times. The author was Dr. William Bullein, a native of the Isle of Ely. He was in holy orders, and from 1550 to 1553 was rector of Blaxhall, Suffolk. He afterwards practised as a physician in London, where he died in 1576, and was buried by the side of his brother (a noted preacher) in the church of St. Giles, Cripplegate. He was the author of several books on medicine, including Bullein's Defence against all Sicknes, Sornes, and Woundes that dooe daily assaulte Mankinde, published in 1562, and from this work the following has been extracted:—

"I dyd know wythin these few years a false Witch called M[other] Line, in a town of Suffolk called Perham, which with a payre of Ebene beades and certain charmes, had no small resort of foolysh women when their chyldren were syck. To thys lame Witch they resorted to have the Fairie charmed and the Spyute coniured away: through the prayers and the Ebene beades whych she sayd came from the holy land and were sanctified at Rome. Through whom many goodly cures have been don, but my chaunce was to burn ye sayd beads. Oh! That damable witches be suffered to liue unpunished and so many blessed men burned: witches be more hurtful in this realm than either quarten, pox, or pestilence. I knew in a towne called Kelshall, in Suffolk, a Witch whose name was M[other] Didge, who with certain Aue Maries upon her Ebene Beades and a waxe Candle, used this Charme folowyng for S. Anthonies fyre, having the sicke body before her, holding up her Hande saying: there came two Angels out of the North east, one brought fyre the other brought frost, out fyre and in frost. In nomine patris, etc. I could reherse an C of sutch knackes of these holy gossips, the fyre take them all, for they be Gods enemyes."

SOME SUFFOLK CHURCH NOTES. No. LXXI.

STUTTON.

This church, dedicated in honour of St. Peter, includes chancel, nave, and square south-west tower of Perpendicular date, with modern transept and north chapel, and an organ chamber south of the chancel. The roof is partly ceiled, and two angelic figures bear shields with arms of Mills impaling Barnardiston and Barrington respectively, while a third shield shews the arms of Norwich Diocese. There are five bells, of which the first, fourth, and fifth are lettered—

MILES GRAYE MADE ME, 1684.

The second— CHARLES NEWMAN MADE ME, 1692.

The third— HENRY PLEASANT MADE ME, 1706.

The west end of the church is screened off as a vestry, and there is some curious old oak panelling with six figures carved in low relief in arched compartments, two of which carry sword in right hand and scales in left, two hold anchors, one a cross, and the remaining one is pouring from a vessel in one hand to a cup in the other. Above the chancel arch hangs the royal escutcheon of G. IV. R.

The entrance to the old rood-loft staircase remains in the south wall. Stones beneath the nave west window and transept north window record that:—

This church was enlarged and re-arranged 1862.

Thomas Mills, Rector. Charles Boby } Churchwardens.
George Stanford }

This transept was built to the glory of God in the year 1862. The north window of this transept was presented by the Honourable Anne Middleton, widow of Sir William Fowle F. Middleton, Bart., of Shrubland Park in this county.

The earliest memorial inscription is on a small brass plate in the pavement:—

Of (yours charite pray for y^e Sowle) of Iohn Smythe | whiche
Iohn decesyd y^e xiii day of Auguſt In the yere of | our lord god
m^{cccc}xxxiiii 5 (whose foule) Ihu have m^{ey}.

The words in brackets have been carefully erased, no doubt to protect the memorial from Puritan pillage.

Another small strip of metal is roughly engraved thus:—

FRA : HERDSON VXOR CHARISS : | P^{CESSIT} 1619.

Two ancient monuments of the Jermy family have been moved to the west end of the nave, where the earlier is on the south side, and has effigies of Sir Isaac Jermy (in armour) and his dame kneeling at a prayer desk. Over them is a shield, quarterly, 1st and 4th (Arg.), a lion rampant (Gu.), Jermy; 2nd and 3rd (Sa.), a bend (Or), in sinister chief leopard's face of the 2nd Isaac, impaling (Az.) a lion rampant (Arg.), Pagrawe.

The respective arms of husband and wife are displayed on smaller shields below, and on the desk whereat they kneel is inscribed:—

ΕΘΗΚΕΝ | Ο ΦΙΛΟΣ.

Under the husband is engraven, in Roman capitals:—

Sacrum memorie Dñi Isaaci Iermij eqvitis | avrati, filij Iohannis

The other memorial, of similar style, is placed against the opposite wall, the figures kneeling under arches before a prayer desk. The husband is in cloak, doublet and breeches of sober cut, and has an open book in his hand, and his son kneels behind him, while his epitaph runs, in Roman capitals:—

Here lyeth y^e body of Iohn Iermy Esq. eldest Sonn of S^r Isaac |
Iermy K^t he married Mary Rowe the daughter & heire of | William
Rowe Esq. second sonne of S^r William Rowe | K^t he had Issue

benefit of those that shold svceed him. | He died at y^e age of 61 in
y^e yeare 1662, & no dovt | he reigns victoriovsly in y^e highest heavens.
| This Monvment was set vp by his widow y^e year 1664.

The widow's figure is habited in a plainly made gown, with a loose kerchief over her head, and her two daughters kneel behind her. The only shield on this monument bears Jermy, impaling (Arg.) a chevron engrailed (Az.), between three trefoil-leaves slipped per pale (Gu. and Vert), Rowe.

The lady's panegyric, as it appears (in Roman capitals) to have been put up by herself, might lead one to suppose that modesty was not of much account in those days:—

Martha's checkt for neglect of Christ's pvre word,

Mary for her love thereto's on record.

This my dear Mary had no less regard

Vnto the sacred words of God's Heravld.

Another Anna I may trvly say

For her fastings & prayers night & day.

Ciconia like the longer that she liv'd

The sweeter breath & more spiritv'liz'd.

Not spiderlike figvring vanity,

Bvt like the silkworme seeking verity.

This pious matron stood vpon her gvard,

Resisting him whome else wold her have marr'd.

These verses were made by Iohn Iermy Esq. in | memory of his wife, a little before his death.

A HARVEST QUARREL AND ITS RESULTS, A.D. 1344.—The following incident is translated from a Coroner's Roll in the Public Record Office, No. 18, membrane 29:—

It happened in the village of Dry Drayton (Cambs.) on the Saturday after the decollation of St. John (29 Augt. 1344) that a certain Hugh de Penteneye, thrasher, was found slain, and Joan Pesecod of Milham his wife first found him and raised the hue and cry. Whereupon Edward de Onyng, the coroner, was informed, and on Monday after the Nativity of the Virgin (Sept. 8th) he viewed the body and diligently inquired concerning his death. The jury sworn were William Halsteyn, William Gilmyn, Roger Taillour, Henry Sygar, Henry Doune, Thomas Warlock, William Rich Dich, John Smyth, Hugh Agate (? atte gate), William Sped, William Ward, and Richard Elger. They say that a certain William, son of Robert Campionn of Dry Drayton, on the aforesaid Saturday after bedtime, beat his wife Isabella, and a row took place between them in the house of Thomas le Heyward in Dry Drayton. Thomas hearing the noise, got out of his bed and wished to make peace between them, whereupon William drew his knife and would have killed him, and Thomas being in fear of his life raised hue and cry upon him. And a certain Hugh de Penteneye, thrasher, lying in Thomas's house, got up at the hue and cry and went between them. And William wounded the said Hugh in the right arm with his knife, so that he immediately died. The price of the knife was a penny, for which the parish will answer. William fled directly after the murder, the sheriff is ordered to arrest him. He had no lands or tenements, but he had a quarter and two bushels of drag (coarse corn) worth 2^s 6^d. The four neighbours were John Beer, John Leef, junior, John Gerrard, John Hogge.

This extract might as aptly be headed "The folly of interfering between husband and wife." It would seem almost as if the Hayward kept a lodging-house during the harvest. Somehow it seems a suitable position for him, to look after the cattle by day and the casual labourers by night. For Hugh the thrasher, as his name shows, was an outsider. Probably his wife, Joan Pesecod, worked with him. Since the introduction of machinery, the custom of hiring extra men, or "furriners," for the harvest has become unnecessary. Hugh must have had his brachial artery severed, he could have died so suddenly of nothing else but bleeding. Poor Joan Pesecod of Milham! she had not taught her husband the folly of interfering in matrimonial differences. I wonder if she was really his wife. Let us hope the Hayward wanted a housekeeper.

REPLY.

CHESTERTON, CAMBS.: CHURCH APPROPRIATION (pp. 155, 156).—A timely tract on “The Appropriation of Tithes,” by Edward S. Norris (sometime M.P.), gives in summary form some instructive figures relating to the several counties. In Cambridgeshire nearly as much in the way of tithe-money payments is alienated from impropriated benefices as annexed, while in respect of land, nearly four times as much is alienated. In the case of Chesterton, it will be observed that £198 is annexed to the living, while £526 goes to Trinity College, Cambridge.

The following statement of tithes held by impropiators in certain parishes in Cambridgeshire will perhaps astonish some of our readers:—

Parishes.	Annexed.	Alienated.	Impropriator.
Arrington (V.) . . .	—	396 12 0	Trinity College, Camb.
Barton (V.) . . .	138 0 0	400 0 0	King's College, Camb.
Burwell	—	1658 13 7	University of Camb.
Chesterton (V.) . . .	198 0 0	526 0 0	Trinity College, Camb.
Elm (V.)	638 11 7	1650 7 5	Sinecure Rector.
Ely Trinity and St. Mary .	—	3926 10 3	Dean and Chapter of Ely.
Haddenham (V.) . . .	285 0 0	1850 0 0	Archdeacon of Ely.
Steeple Morden (V.) . .	246 4 0	749 6 0	New College, Oxford.
Triploe (V.)	137 15 0	634 13 0	St. Peter's College, Camb.
Whittlesea (V.) . . .	456 10 5	3954 8 6	Earl Waldegrave & other.
Wisbeach St. Mary (V.) .	879 0 0	1475 0 0	Dean and Chapter of Ely.

The total alienated in this one county amounts to no less a sum than £29,763. 18s. 2d.

Mr. Norris specially points out the injustice of this impropriation in regard to the consequent impoverishment of both church and parish, and the parson in particular. It is scarcely surprising that a Clergy Sustentation Fund meets with inadequate support.
